

A June 2008 Update

Monday, 16 June 2008

Left Brain has been keeping me active for the past few weeks, serving as a production liaison for a fairly complex web utility and social network.

In between activities there, I've been reading, spending time with family, swimming, giving things away on Craigslist, successfully catching up with some awesome people, doing some campaigning for Dan Schesch, who's seeking the Democratic nomination for Treasurer in the City of St. Louis this year, working to develop a web strategy with The Lawler Organization, and of course, taking lots of photos.

The season is starting off unique and full of creative energy. Within seven days, I need to book a flight to anywhere Southwest flies or lose my freebie.