

Lollapalooza Day Two

Sunday, 03 August 2008

Another great day of music in Chicago. Christian, Jen--our kind and wonderful hostess, and I met Danielle and Brandon for brunch at Ann Sather. I had one of the specials: the lumberjack wrap-potato, cheese, eggs, bacon, and by my special request, green peppers for plenty of energy before another day competing with crowds for prime viewing/breakin-it-down real estate. Brandon and Danielle dropped Christian and I off downtown after a high-speed architectural tour of the business district. I caught the Tings again, MGMT for the first time (thanks Jaime!), an unforgettable Jamie Lidell, Sharon Jones and the Dap Kings, and Wilco from afar.

Midway through the day, I caught up with Morgan and Steve, who had stayed behind in STL for Nate's funeral and missed the first day of the festival. I have mixed feelings about leaving, but I feel pretty sure that Nate would approve. Anyway, more pics: